

Spreitenbach

Reappropriation of the Metropolitan Periphery: A Manual for a Public Space

Sebastian Baumann and Ryusei Murata

Two worlds—the metropolitan and the local—are present in Spreitenbach. Local communities in Spreitenbach do not only profit from the metropolitan world. Locals are even endangered by the metropolitans, a trend which is noticeable and is going to impact the grown social fabric even more. The Shoppi has the potential to link the local and the metropolitan, to become a public space for Spreitenbach by celebrating the potential of a shopping mall in the metropolitan periphery.

The Two Worlds of Spreitenbach: The Locals and the Shoppers

Since the 50s, people from over 70 nations moved to Spreitenbach. Situated at the border to the Canton of Zurich in the Canton of Aargau, Spreitenbach's political situation and geographical position continuously attracted new inhabitants. Experiencing different waves of new settlers over time, Spreitenbach became a multi-national place where at this moment more than one out of two inhabitants is a foreigner. Today, this diverse mix of people is confronted with a massive flux of visitors, passing by Spreitenbach to use the shopping infrastructure.

Depending on whom you spend time with and where you are in Spreitenbach, it can appear as a village with multi-national communities or as a place highly frequented for shopping by people from all over the Limmattal-Region.

The Construction of a 70 Nations Village and the Shoppi Tivoli

In the past, Spreitenbach grew diverse and became more and more attractive for ephemeral shopping-trips. Today, big scale infrastructure-projects make Spreitenbach attractive for investors to built. New built housing units excluding social classes endanger the evolved social fabric. Today in Spreitenbach, this trend is already noticeable.

Until 1960: Agricultural Village

Before 1960, Spreitenbach was a village who did small business and agriculture. Less immigrants and homogeneous society. A first glimps of modernity is introduced with an organized trash collection, financed by each house hold paying 12 swiss francs.

In 1960 a first Richplan comes into use and the Längacker was built. Because of the Konkubinatsverbot in the Canton of Zurich many young couples moved to Spreitenbach situated on the border of the Canton of Aargau. Lots of new inhabitants still work in Zurich and contribute marginally to the public life. The Autobahn contributes significantly to upcoming changes of Spreitenbach.

Unser Plan vom Paradies.

Wir haben den Grund für den Erfolg des Shopping Centers gefunden! Und wir sagen es Ihnen. Die Grundidee des Shopping Centers ist die, den Menschen ein Paradies zu schaffen. Ein Paradies, das nicht nur ein Einkaufszentrum ist, sondern ein Ort, an dem man sich wohlfühlt. Ein Ort, an dem man sich entspannen kann. Ein Ort, an dem man sich unterhalten kann. Ein Ort, an dem man sich lieben kann.

1. Wir helfen Ihnen, bequem und einfach einzukaufen. Ohne Parkieren. Ohne Hektik. Ohne Schlämpe. Unsere Ladenstrasse ist gedeckt und vollklimatisiert. Das Shopping Center ist für Sie da. Ab 12. März 1970 können wir Ihnen ein Angebot machen, das Sie nicht ablehnen werden. Wir bieten Ihnen auch eine angenehme Atmosphäre.

2. Bringen Sie Ihre Familie mit. Kommen Sie mit Freunden. Sie haben für alle gegorgt: Kinderstühle, Kindererholplätze, ein grosses Halleck, ein herrlicher Innenhof mit Farnen, Blumen.

3. Paradies, das gibt es! Man muss es nur finden. (Gibt es übrigens nicht.)

Unser Plan vom Paradies: gesteckt. Denn, ein wirkliches Paradies baut man nicht ohne einen richtigen Plan. Und planen heisst für uns: die Zukunft besser gestalten. Zum Beispiel: Ihren Einkauf von morgen. Wer hat morgen noch Lust und Zeit, in der verstopften City einzukaufen? – Wir finden, es geht auch anders. Besser, bequemer, angenehmer. Und darum meinen wir: Paradies, das gibt es! Man muss sie nur finden. Uns finden Sie auf jeden Fall ab 12. März 1970 im Shopping Center Spreitenbach. Auf bald!

From now on, people moving here mostly have an immigrants background. Lots of them stayed since, founded a family and started working in the area. At the same time, the construction of the Autobahn, the first IKEA outside of Scandinavian countries and the Shoppi influenced by the philosophy of Victor Gruen let Spreitenbach become an interesting destination for ephemeral shopping visits.

Limmattalbahn, the new tram line will connect Spreitenbach to Altstetten directly. This makes Spreitenbach attractive for investors to build new housing units for the social upper class such as the Tivoli Garten Project. At the same time, the Limmattalbahn endangers the evolved social fabric and opens doors for Gentrification.

Over the last 10 years more Swiss people than immigrants moved to Spreitenbach. Even though Spreitenbach's immigrants ratio still stays over 50%, due to the big scale housing and infrastructure projects, a new trend is noticeable.

In Between Locals and Metropolitans

Two worlds – the metropolitan and the local – are present in Spreitenbach. The two worlds exist separated from each other, touching each other delicately. They stand in a relation of power which hinders the local communities to unfold fully in the build urban fabric.

Shoppi tivoli was built not only as a commercial place but also a social meeting point. This idea influenced by Victor Gruen proposed the Shoppi to locals as a public space, not only a as a consumerism temple. However the way people use the Shoppi changed drastically and it has never become nor the centre nor a public space for the village.

The Shoppi has a huge impact on the region. In a 30 minutes drive from city of Zurich you reach Spreitenbach and if you don't have car, you can reach the Shoppi in a 30 minutes ride with the S-Bahn – from the City Center. The Limmattalbahn, which interconnects the region, enables even more people to access Spreitenbach easily.

When the Shoppi was first built, different spaces were designed where you actually didn't have to spend money in order to spend time inside. Since, nearly all of these spaces have been transformed into shops. Even though this didn't endanger the financial success of the Shoppi, local people nowadays only go there for consumption.

Towards the Shoppi Tivoli as a Public Space for the Local Community

The main focus of the Shoppi is making money. The people of Spreitenbach can not unfurl in its built existence. Being an highly secured box close to informal local communities, the main goal of the Shoppi are the shoppers coming there only for a short buying experience. In order to reappropriate the Shoppi as a public space for communities in Spreitenbach, seven interventions propose transformations of in-between spaces, influenced by the initial convictions of Victor Gruen.

Threshold of the Shoppi

What is created for the Shoppers.

What is perceived everyday from the locals.

A Manual for a Public Space: Seven Interventions

LIST OF INTERVENTIONS

1. Do you see me when we pass?
 - ~ creating an intervisibility between the shoppers and the local placenur
 - lifting / opening partly the skin of the Shoppi
2. Stay forever
 - ~ a place for locals and shoppers to gather / spend time
 - transforming unused parking lots due to the opening of the Ummattalbahn into an outdoor cultural center with a market
3. The third place, Shoppi.
 - ~ creating spaces in the Shoppi for temporary houses & offices
 - reappropriating inside surfaces of the Shoppi; transforming them slightly
4. Hit me baby one more time
 - ~ a boxing ring on top of the Shoppi for local and regional athletes
 - providing access to the roof of the Shoppi, building a small Arena - a boxing ring

- J. Everyday pathways
 - ~ letting the locals pass through the Shoppi even when shops are closed
 - opening the doors (unlocking), defining paths through the inside of the Shoppi
6. Folly for a parking lot
 - ~ creating a micro-climat with the waste heat of the Shoppi
 - building a box, heated with the waste heat of the Shoppi; a warm, comfortable space for after sunset
7. The social station
 - ~ creating a space where locals and shoppers intuitively hang out; architecture as a pretext to spend time together
 - expanding the roof of the local bus-stop, transforming it into a social meeting pot / a pavilion

Seven intervention toward Shoppi as a Public Space.

Folly for a parking lot. A box heated by waste heat of the Shoppi.

Everyday pathway. Always accessible pathways for locals through the Shoppi.

Hit me baby one more time. A boxing ring for local athletes.

Stay forever. Transformation of unused parking lots into a cultural center with a market.

The social station. Architecture as a pretext for locals and metropolitans to spend time together.

Do you see me when we pass? An intervisibility between the shoppers and the local flaneur.

The third place, Shoppi. Temporary homes & offices in the inside of the shoppi.

A sequence of public spaces, celebrating the potential of a shopping mall in the metropolitan periphery.
